SUBJECT: National Academy of Public Administration hosting an Online Dialogue on the Defense Civilian Intelligence Personnel System

From now through March 22, 2010, the National Academy of Public Administration is hosting an Online Dialogue on the Defense Civilian Intelligence Personnel System (DCIPS). The Dialogue uses a web 2.0 interactive platform and is designed to obtain input and ideas from the thousands of employees affected by DCIPS.

This Dialogue is a unique opportunity for our employees to engage with each other in discussion, share experiences, debate, and “vote” their support for ideas while remaining anonymous. The Dialogue is open to the entire DCIPS workforce—from the most junior employee to the most senior manager—and all are encouraged to participate. The information obtained throughout the Dialogue will directly support the review of DCIPS that the Academy is currently conducting.

We are asking you to encourage your workforce to visit the website at <http://Dcipsdialogue.uservoice.com> between now and March 22, log in and participate in the Dialogue. Because the Dialogue is web-based, participants will engage in the Dialogue on the unclassified system. Further instruction will be provided in a separate email about how to register and log in to the Dialogue.

Thank you for your support of this important aspect of the Academy’s review. If you have any questions about the Academy’s review, please contact Rick Cinquegrana at rcinq@napawash.org.
